A Finnish high-light for sustainable lighting

We have a genuine,
ambitious,
and eco-friendly culture.

Pilke's story starts in Finnish forests with a deep commitment to materials, craftsmanship, and Nordic sustainable production. We have a genuine, ambitious, and eco-friendly culture, dedicated to crafting enduring lighting that last from generation to generation – tomorrow's classics.

Our sustainable wooden lighting, designed by Finnish talents like Tuukka Halonen, Harri Koskinen, Janne Uusi-Autti, and Simo Serpola, graces luxury hotels, embassies, airports, and countless homes worldwide.

Every Pilke piece is exclusively crafted from FSC® or PEFC-certified Finnish plywood, precision-cut using state-of-the-art water cutting technology, and meticulously assembled by hand without the need for glue or screws, showcasing the pure beauty of wood.

Since autumn 2021, Pilke is owned by the Swedish furniture brand Maze Interior. The products have been nominated and won the Design Plus award in Frankfurt, Good Design and Good Green Design in Chicago and Eco Design in Helsinki several times.

The Making of Pilke Lights

1. The thin plywood for the Pilke lights is manufactured in Hirvensalmi in southeast Finland by the family company Koskisen that was founded more than 100 years ago. The plywood comes from high-quality, renewable Finnish birch grown in sustainably managed forests. Material is either FSC or PEFC certified which assures that forestry is carried out in an ecological, economical, and socially sustainable way. Koskisen place great importance on taking care of the environment, their employees and stakeholders. They help ensure the sustainable use of Nordic forests and almost 100% of Koskisen's wood raw material is converted into products, with close to zero waste.
2. The plywood sheets are sent to Muototerä in Tampere. Here pieces for the lamps are being cut out by a water jet cutter from the plywood sheets. This cutting method is environmentally friendly and allows fast, cost-effective, and ecological cutting. No chemicals, vapor or smoke is produced during the cutting process and dust and other particles can be easily and safely filtered from the water. Unlike other cutting methods the water cutting leaves the natural surface of the birch plywood without burn marks.
3. The plywood parts are sent on to Kolmituote in Salo. Kolmituote is a non-profit, social company owned by the city of Salon and a few other municipalities and associations operating in the region. Kolmituote offers employment and rehabilitation services for partially-abled people. Three people in Kolmituote are trained in the assembly of the lamps. All parts are first lightly sanded before put together without any glue or screws, all assembled by hand.
4. The finished lamp shades that are to be white, black, or brown are sent over to a neighbouring painting company to get their colour. Except for birch.
5. All lamps are packed and sent to our warehouse in Norrköping, Sweden – awaiting delivery to their next destination, our customers.

Pilke Designers

Tuukka Halonen

Tuukka Halonen is the designer behind Pilke's most famous series, Signature Collection, which is a combination of Finnish craft technique and ultra-modern computer geometry. Through repetition of plywood parts in a right angle, beautiful three-dimensional and geometrically decorative light shades can be created.
→ Page 8–39.

Harri Koskinen

Harri Koskinen is an industrial designer, who has received several international awards. For Pilke, Koskinen has designed the architectural plywood lamp series Ristikko, which has a focus on natural indirect light.

Janne Auusi-Autti

Janne Uusi-Autti is the creator of Pilke Pioni Collection. Pioni is a beautiful, organic shaped pendant, creating a natural soft atmosphere in any home, restaurant or public space. Pioni lamps are made of ultrathin birch plywood.

Simo Serpola

Simo Serpola is a Finnish designer based in Helsinki who specializes in space and product design. He strives to combine art, science, and technology to create interactive designs that are both practical and aesthetically pleasing.
